What is an MSLP? How an MSP for Learning and Development can Drive Additional Cost Savings Using VMS Technology | Harbor Ballroom A

Companies have exponentially increased their Learning and Development (L&D) programs that train workers for compliance or to address gaps in college curriculums. Estimates show that Fortune 500 companies spend greater than $25 million per year creating content or outsourcing to vendors. Yet this spend has not been optimized through an MSP (known as MSLP in L&D programs) where credentialing and cost savings can be managed, plus curriculums reviewed for continuous improvement. Learn how customized VMS technology can track both contingent worker (or even full-time workers) training plans using tertiary classes or via a Learning Management System (LMS).

Speakers:

Rick Faber, Executive Vice President, Acro Service Corporation

Amy Keely, Director of Marketing, Learning and Development, Acro Service Corporation
